Living in the city vs living in the countryside

Some of my friends prefer living in the city. But some other friends prefer living in the countryside. I think both are good. But there is a problem. When you live in a city you are more in danger. But when you live in a countryside you cannot see your friends. But there is a place where you're not in danger and you can see your friends. It is called village! And that's where I love to live. I live in Moschochori. It is a village that I really really like. I can hang out with my friends.

I can go to the park or square whenever I want. And the best of all: you can breathe fresh air in a village!

There is peace and quiet, so when you visit a village be careful, don't make a lot of noise. There is no traffic and pollution.

When I grow up I want to live in Pavliani.

Elpida Katsiada
E' class